TO THE CHILDREN

OF THE LATE

SOLOMON PIPER,

OF

DUBLIN, N. H.

AND TO THEIR DESCENDANTS,

THE FOLLOWING REGISTER

OF HIS FAMILY,

IS RESPECTFULLY INSCRIBED

BY

SOLOMON PIPER.

Boston, Mass., October, 1849.

EXPLANATION.

The plan of arrangement in the following genealogy is the same as that adopted by Lemuel Shattuck, Esq., in his Memoir of the Minot Family, published in the first volume of the "New England Historical and Genealogical Register." It is explained as follows:—

"The numbers inserted in the parentheses on the left are the numbers of the paragraphs, each, generally, containing the notice of one entire family. The Roman numbers immediately after, indicate the generation of the family, including the first person named. The descendants are doubly numbered—first in consecutive order, and secondly by each family separately. The figures in brackets, after the name, refer back to these numbers of the descendants, indicating the family and connections to which the individual belongs. The numbers inserted in the parentheses on the right, against the name of a child, show the subsequent paragraph where a notice of the family of such child may be found."

Great pains have been taken and considerable expense incurred in completing the following genealogy; but it may be proper to state here that it formed no part of the design, in collecting the materials for the same, to pursue the subject any further than the family of Solomon Piper was concerned. These pages, therefore, do not profess to contain a genealogy of the Piper family in its various branches. The descendants of the first settler, Nathaniel Piper, are numerous and widely scattered over the country. The account, in the Appendix, of several brothers of Joseph Piper, the father of Solomon Piper, was obtained incidentally, and it was deemed expedient to insert it here, as it might probably save some labor, if any one should undertake, at some future day, to collect materials for a complete genealogy of the whole family.

FAMILY OF SOLOMON PIPER.

FIRST GENERATION.

- (1.) I. Nathaniel Piper, who emigrated from England, probably from Dartmouth, was an early inhabitant of Ipswich, Mass., where he died about 1676. He left a will, which was approved 1676, and is recorded in the Essex Probate Office. In it he mentions the names of the children given below. He drew a share and a half in Plumb Island in 1665, and had other privileges granted from time to time, until his death, as appears by the proprietors' records. His children were:—

the "New Marsh Farm," of 1200 acres, belonging to the heirs of Nathaniel Saltonstall, of Haverhill. In 1731, he removed to Concord, having, on the 6th of March, 1731, bought of Thomas Wheeler, Sr., and Thomas Wheeler, Jr., their farm in the southwesterly part of Concord, "for 1200 pounds passable money." On the same day he bought other lands of Robert Cummins; and, on the 6th of October, he bought 80 acres of Rebecca Prescot, widow of Jonathan, deceased, for £100. Other real estate was afterwards purchased. He died in Concord, May 11, 1752, leaving a will, dated February 15, 1749, which was settled by his son Joseph, the executor, without being entered in the Probate Court.

His father, "for and in consideration of the love and good will and affection, that I have and dobear to my well beloved son Joseph Piper," deeded him, on the 19th of August, 1741, one half of his farm, and he bought the other half for £200 lawful money, December 3, 1751. His brother Jonathan had quitclaimed to him, June 13, 1737, and Josiah did the same, April 23, 1742, all the right in their father's estate. In 1762, Joseph Piper bought of Amos Prescott, his farm of 172 acres, two dwelling-houses and other appurtenances, in Acton, for £533 6 8, lawful money, and then removed from Concord to that town. He died there, December 19, 1802. He married Esther Wright, daughter of Henry Wright, Westford, Mass. She died April 7, 1808. Their children were as follows:—*

Silas Piper, [28—11,] was settled by his father on the paternal estate in Acton, where he continued to support and minister to the comfort of his parents through their declining years. He was remarkable for his social qualities. His house was the seat of hospitality, and a home for the returning members of the ancient family, who were ever greeted with a hearty welcome, and entertained at his liberal board. He reared a numerous family of children, and lived to see them all respectably settled in life. He passed all his days on the same estate, and died at the age of 71 years.

Mehitable Barker, afterwards wife of Silas Piper, abovenamed, descended from an ancient family in the town of Acton, where she still lives (1849) at the age of 78, in the enjoyment of health and the full possession of all her faculties. Her comely form and benignant countenance, the faithful index of cheerfulness and contentment within, are the delight of all around her. She is the only survivor of all the sons and daughters of the late Joseph Piper. She lives with her youngest son, Jonathan A. Piper, who succeeds to the inheritance of his father and grandfather, and she shares largely in the affections of her grateful children. Long may she continue to bless and be blessed of her race.

[†] The children of Silas were, Mehitable,* Silas, Susan, Nancy,* Lucindia,* Jerusha, Josiah, Anna Barker,* died in infancy, Augustus,* died in infancy, Jonathan, Ann Esther Wright, Mary.

Solomon Piper, above-named, removed from Concord to Acton with his father and family, in 1762, and lived there until he became of age. About this time, the revolutionary war broke out, and he was one of the party that marched from Acton to Concord, to meet the British troops at the "Bridge," where Captain Davis, with a number of his gallant company, fell, on the morning of the memorable 19th of April, 1775. He marched to Saratoga at the call of General Gates, and was present at the surrender of Burgoyne and his army. He was at Rhode Island with General Sullivan, and performed other tours of duty during the revolutionary struggle. At the close of the war, he purchased land in Temple, N. H., in the north part of the town, and went to reside there about the year 1785. In the year 1793, he sold his estate in Temple and purchased a farm in Dublin, of Silas Brown, which contained about 120 acres, situated in the southeast part of the town, and was made up of the north halves of lots No. 1, 2d range, and No. 1, 3d range. Only a small portion of his new farm had been cleared and put under cultivation. He removed to Dublin, April 15, 1794. Here he spent the remainder of his days in the pursuits of husbandry, dying of paralysis, at the age of 73 years and 2 months.

In person, Mr. Piper was rather small, and his frame was slender. His height was nearly five feet nine inches. constitution was not strong, yet not decidedly feeble. With light complexion and blue eyes, his personal appearance, when young, must have been good. His motions were quick; he walked easily and generally fast. He was diffident and retiring, and avoided, as much as possible, all notoriety. In politics, he was a true whig of the federal stamp. Several traits in his character claim notice in this place. He was exact in his habits, temperate and regular in his modes of living, seldom abroad, and never at a tavern of an evening. No word was ever heard from his lips bordering on profanity, nor did he ever speak with levity of things sacred. From conscientious scruples, he declined taking the oath of a civil magistrate, thus literally fulfilling the divine command, "Swear not at all." He was strict in the observance of the Sabbath. No labor, that it was possible to avoid, was allowed to be performed on that holy day. Many is the time that his boys have felt the smart of the parental rod upon their shoulders, whilst amusing themselves in a neighboring brook, or indulging in other sport on that sacred season. He was industrious, and though never a strong man, yet few would perform more labor in a year, or The following circumstance shows his decision do it better. and prudent management:—When he bought his farm in Dublin, he gave a note, for part of the payment, with interest at 6 per cent. There was a verbal agreement that the note should not be sold or transferred; but a short time after, a certain money-lender notified him that he had purchased this note. Mr. Piper called upon him, expressed his surprise at finding his note there, and his inability to make immediate payment. "Oh," said the money lender, "I do not want you to pay now, but you must give me 16 per cent." Mr. Piper concluded, after paying this rate of interest a year or two, not to let the note run, but to sell a portion of his land and thus meet the payment. He did so, and in speaking of the affair near the close of his life, he remarked, that if he had not taken that course, the said money-lender would, in all probability, have got possession of his whole farm, and he himself have been a poor man. But by his industry and prudence, with the assistance of a most excellent wife, he brought up, comfortably, a large family, and had a competence for his support in his declining years. The whole number of his children was twelve, eight sons and four daughters, ten of whom lived to become heads of families.

Susanna Pratt, whom Mr. Piper married, was born in Greenwich, Mass., Nov. 3, 1768. Her parents originated in Westborough, Mass. The ancestors of her father were probably English; his mother's name was Ruhama Tomlinson, and is supposed to have been born in Ireland. Her father, Rufus Pratt, died in the army of the Revolution, leaving a wife and six young children, with but little property. Her mother's maiden name was Hannah Ball, whose parents lived in Temple, N. H. On the death of her father, the family removed to Temple, and Susanna went to live in the family of Mr. Joseph Heald. She remained there nine years, at the end of which time she had arrived at the age of eighteen. After leaving the family of Mr. Heald, she married Mr. Piper, as has been stated.

In person, Mrs. Piper was of middling stature, light complexion, blue eyes, large open features, animated and expressive countenance. She was resolute and persevering in whatever she undertook, industrious and judicious in the affairs of her household, and in providing for her large family of children. Few persons performed so much labor under similar circumstances and to better account. Much of the well being of her numerous family depended upon her, and well did she sustain her part. But her services were not confined to her family alone; for in sickness or in trouble she ministered to the whole circle of the neighborhood. During the latter part of her life she was sorely afflicted with a scrofulous humor; but she retained her faculties and her usefulness, in a good degree, to the close of life. To few, could the words of the wise man respecting "a virtuous woman" be applied with more propriety than to Mrs. Piper. She became a member of Rev. Edward Sprague's church in 1814. Mr. Piper united with the same church in 1821, after it came under the pastoral care of Rev. L. W. Leonard. Both maintained a consistent Christian course of life, conscientiously sustaining the institutions of religion, meeting affliction with due resignation, and dying with the peace and hope that pertain to faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.*

FIFTH GENERATION.

(5.) V. Solomon Piper, [29—1,] son of Solomon Piper, [23—6,] was born in Temple, N. H., July 19, 1789. At the age of five years he removed with his parents to Dublin, where he was brought up to subdue and cultivate the soil. His opportunities for obtaining an education were limited. His usual attendance at a common school was not more than eight or ten weeks in a year, and schools of that day afforded small advantages compared with those of the present. His education was finished, so far as public schools were concerned, by attending the Academy at New Ipswich six weeks, at the conclusion of which time, he was honored with a certificate from the Preceptor, stating that he was "well qualified for teaching an English Grammar School," and the following winter he put it in practice.

In June, 1810, at the age of twenty-one, he started for Boston on foot, in pursuit of employment, bearing with him in a bundle, his wardrobe and all his effects, amounting, perhaps to one hundred dollars. On his arrival there, he immediately engaged himself as a clerk to Mr. Benjamin Fessenden, a dealer in wood and other fuel on Sea street. At the close of the war of 1812 he entered into copartnership with his employer. Subsequently he purchased the stand, and, at the decease of Mr. Fessenden, succeeded to the whole business, which, with some additions, he has conducted on the same spot, nearly forty years, to the present time. (1849.)

Whatever of worldly prosperity may have fallen to his lot is but the natural result, under Providence, of patient, persevering industry, guided by an ordinary share of prudence and common sense. No golden prospect of acquiring sudden wealth by speculation was ever able to tempt him from the "even tenor of his way," deeming a slow but less uncertain prospect of gain more conducive to rational and permanent happiness. [The above biographical sketch of Solomon Piper has been inserted at the particular request of friends.]
